

Relational Learning With Indigenous Communities: Reconciling Indigenous Service Learning

Andrea Kennedy (Settler & Métis ancestry) &
Christian Cook (Settler), Mount Royal University with Elders

Grandmother Doreen Spence (Saddle Lake Cree Nation) &
Kupuna Francine Dudoit Tagupa (Hawai'i)

Welcome & Opening Prayer

Welcome to all
in the spirit of love, humility, respect, reciprocity, and the ethical space of engagement

(Ermine, 2007)

Land Acknowledgement

We acknowledge the Ancestors, Elders and Traditional Custodians of the lands on which we work together.

The presenters are humbly and respectfully located in the traditional territories of the Siksika, Kainai, Piikani, Tsuut'ina, ȩyāǰé Nakoda, Métis Nations in the Treaty 7 region of Alberta, and of the Kanaka Maoli in the Hawaiian Islands.

The academic community shares responsibility as caretakers of knowledge in relationship with the land.

All My Relations

Presentation Overview

Reimagine and Reconcile Indigenous Service-Learning

Review of study process & findings

Learning with Elders on 3 key lessons

Reflection & discussion

Review of Study Process & Findings

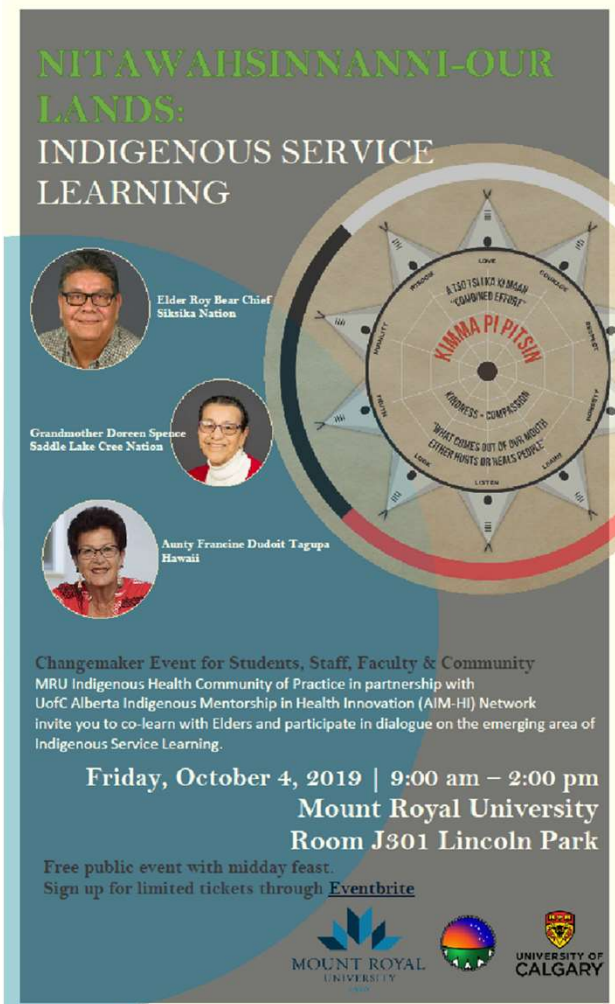

Research Problem & Question:

- ‘service-learning’ is a term that originated in American college programs in the late 1960s for students to gain academic credit and/or payment for community project work (Sigmon, 1979).
- institutional aims may be confounded within an unexamined colonial system that marginalizes meaningful contribution of Indigenous Knowledges and rewards ongoing domination of westernized ways (Battiste, 2013; Hernandez, 2016; Santiago-Ortiz, 2019; Stoecker, 2016).

Indigenous Service Learning was re-examined (Spence et al., 2018) from a critical decolonial lens by questioning:

- “What is Indigenous Service Learning from the perspective of Elders and Students?” (Kennedy et al., 2021, p 4-6)

Review of Study Process & Findings

NITAWAISINNANNI-OUR LANDS:
INDIGENOUS SERVICE
LEARNING

Elder Roy Bear Chief
Siksika Nation

Grandmother Doreen Spence
Saddle Lake Cree Nation

Aunty Francine Dudoit Tagupa
Hawaii

Changemaker Event for Students, Staff, Faculty & Community
MRU Indigenous Health Community of Practice in partnership with UofC Alberta Indigenous Mentorship in Health Innovation (AIM-HI) Network invite you to co-learn with Elders and participate in dialogue on the emerging area of Indigenous Service Learning.

Friday, October 4, 2019 | 9:00 am – 2:00 pm
Mount Royal University
Room J301 Lincoln Park

Free public event with midday feast.
Sign up for limited tickets through Eventbrite

Indigenous Research Methodology:

- relationality (Deloria, 1999) & conversational method (Kovach, 2019)

Participants & Data Collection (post service-learning event)

- 3 Elders: focus group narrative
- 5 Students: paper survey

Data Analysis

- “Elders validated connections between their stories
- Students’ narrative evolved in a constructivist manner
- interpreted as a whole rather than segmented responses to individual questions.
- connections mapped within and between groups to describe how Indigenous Elders and Students deconstructed Indigenous service-learning and reoriented understanding from an Indigenous worldview” (Kennedy et al., 2021, p. 8)

Review Findings – Reconciling ISL

 Relational Learning with Local Indigenous Communities as maintaining good relations through humility, respect, honesty and reciprocity
in response to the following interconnected priorities:

1. The Land - local context where knowledge is held
2. Traditional Ways - collectivist, co-learning and helping
3. Common Language - clear and shared communication
4. Elders - guiding community engagement and relational learning

(Kennedy et al., 2021, p. 9)

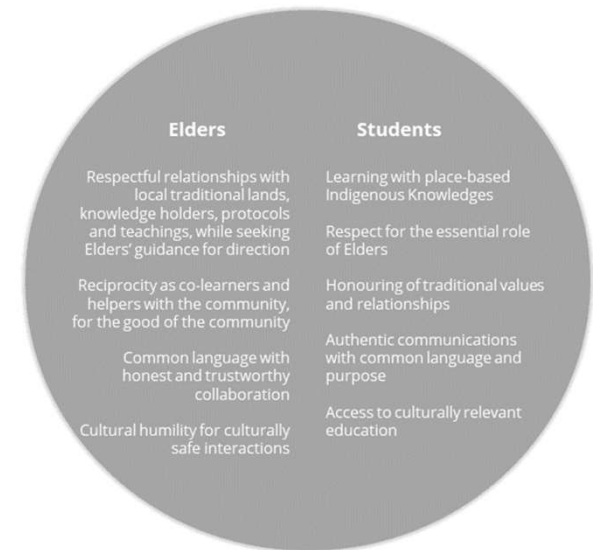

Image gifted by Ashleigh Metcs, 2020

Review Findings – Reconciling ISL

RELATIONAL LEARNING WITH INDIGENOUS COMMUNITIES

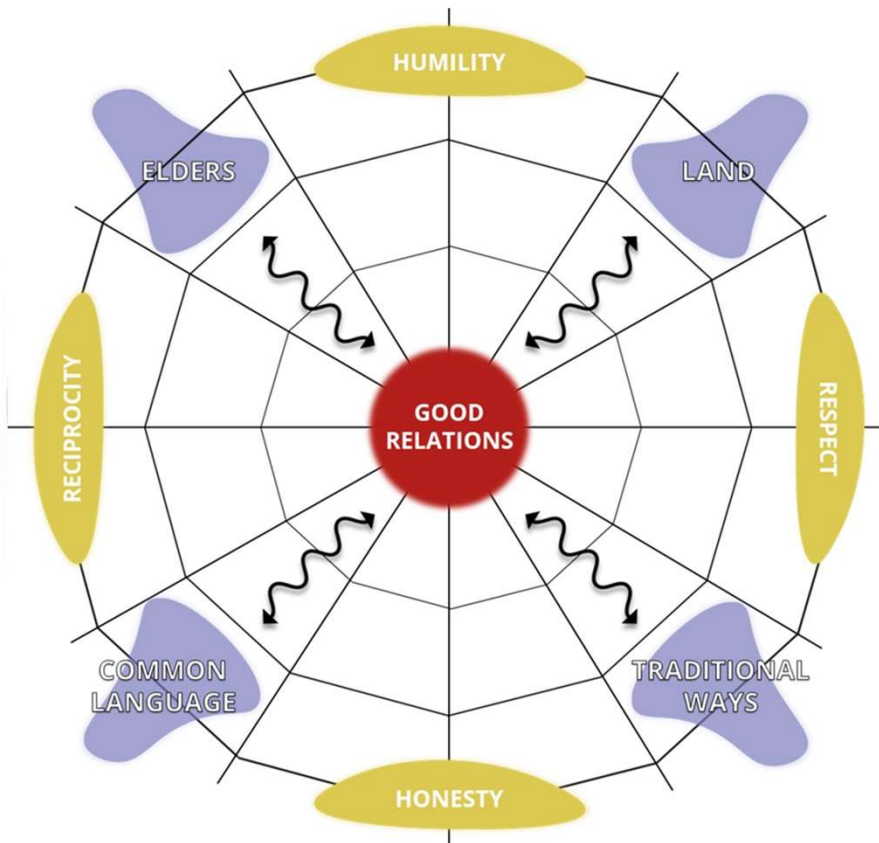

Image gifted by Ashleigh Metcs, 2020

Relationships mapped based on traditional Blackfoot teachings gifted by Elder Roy Bear Chief:

The Creator instructed Anitopisi to wrap the world, with the people in it in his web and let them down to the lower world.

After the people were lowered from the upper world (spoomootsi), Anitopisi explained to them that the web would remain with them so that the Creator would know when to help them.

When there was trouble or an emergency, one string of the web would vibrate and signal the Creator to come to help,

The people were told to pattern their lives after the web so they can stay close together and help each other whenever there is a problem, a vibration on the web.

The whole concept behind the spider web is well adapted to the idea of working together to reach common goals.

(Kennedy et al., 2021, p. 8-10)

Recommendations- Key Lessons with Elders

Elder Roy Bear Chief

Replace the term
service learning

Auntie Francine Dudoit

Re-root
the term
Indigenous

Grandmother Doreen Spence

Respect
the Elders' roles and knowledges

Elder Roy Bear Chief- Replace the term 'service-learning'

“There is serious concern about the term ‘Indigenous service-learning’ as a westernized and misunderstood term because it does not respect Indigenous ways.

This is highly problematic because the lack of relevance will prevent honest partnerships between the university and Indigenous communities.

The university needs to use common language and understanding that is humbly, honestly and respectfully shared by local Indigenous community ways of life and Elders’ wisdom.

Service-learning is about the university. Helping and co-learning is about relationships with Indigenous communities.”

(Kennedy et al., 2021, p. 7)

Aunty Francine Dudoit- Re-root the term 'Indigenous'

“The term ‘Indigenous’ is vague when out of context, perpetuating disregard of Indigenous Peoples by western society;

this term must be re-rooted in the land and local community ways of being, knowing and doing.

In this partnership, the university needs to act “for the good of the people” and honour the Indigenous community’s gain/benefit as central “with a good heart”.

Relationships and trust take time and must be cultivated with humble respect of the local knowledge and protocol of the community.”

(Kennedy et al., 2021, p. 7-8)

Grandmother Doreen Spence- Respect the Elders' Roles and Knowledges

“Elders are essential to setting the direction for community engagement yet are often missing in essential roles within the higher education system.

The university needs to practice cultural humility when working with Elders and Indigenous communities so that interactions are culturally safe.

This requires respect for worldviews that are about relationships with all beings and the environment.

Elders are necessary to support and validate this partnership process because “you can buy education, but you can't buy wisdom”.

The university needs an Elders Council that represents the diverse Indigenous community where the university is situated.”

(Kennedy et al., 2021, p. 8)

Reflection & Discussion

Welcome ideas & questions

- reflective listeners
- chat box comments
- conversation

Invitation to reflect & complete sentence stems:

A question that is emerging for me is...

Something we must learn to do is...

What I find challenging in our current situation is...

Something I plan to do is...

(adapted from Liberating Structures, 2021)

Conclusion & Closing Prayer

Hiy! Hiy!
Aloha
Thank you

Let's keep this conversation going:

Andrea Kennedy

akennedy@mtroyal.ca

Christian Cook

clcook1@mtroyal.ca

References

- Battiste, M. (2013). Decolonizing education. Nourishing the learning spirit. Vancouver, BC: UBC Press, Purich Publishing Limited.
- Deloria, V. (1999). Spirit and reason. B. Deloria, K. Foehner & S. Scinta (Eds.). Golden, CO: Fulcrum Publishing.
- Ermine, W. (2007). The ethical space of engagement. Indigenous Law Journal, 6(1), 193-203.
- Hernandez, K. (2016). Service and learning for whom? Toward a critical decolonizing bicultural service learning pedagogy. Unpublished doctoral dissertation. Los Angeles, CA: Loyola Marymount University.
- Kennedy, A., McGowan, K., Lindstrom, G., Cook, C., Dean, Y., Stauch, J., Barnabe, C., Price, S., Bear Chief, R., Spence, D., & Dudoit Tagupa, F. (2021). Relational learning with Indigenous communities: Elders' and Students' perspectives on reconciling Indigenous service-learning. International Journal of Research on Service-Learning and Community Engagement, 8(1), 1-16. <https://ijrslce.scholasticahq.com/article/18585-relational-learning-with-indigenous-communities-elders-and-students-perspectives-on-reconciling-indigenous-service-learning>
- Kovach, M. (2019). Conversational method in Indigenous research. First Peoples Child & Family Review, 14(1), 123-136.
- Liberating Structures (2021). Mad tea party. <https://www.liberatingstructures.com/mad-tea>
- Santiago-Ortiz, A. (2019). From critical to decolonizing service-learning: limits and possibilities of social justice-based approaches to community service-learning. Michigan Journal of Community Service Learning, 25(1), 43-54.
- Sigmon, R. (1979). Service-learning: three principles. Synergist, 8(1), 9-11.
- Spence, D., Dudoit Tagupa, F., Kennedy, A.P., Cardinal, A., Jones, R., & Scott, M. (2018). Local to global indigenous health in service-learning: Collaboration with child, family and community. In D. Lund (Ed.), Handbook of service learning for social justice (165-193). Surrey, UK: Wiley. <https://doi.org/10.1002/9781119144397.ch6>
- Stoecker, R. (2016). Liberating service learning and the rest of higher education civic engagement. Philadelphia, PA: Temple University Press.

